Crowds pack county courtroom

Special to the Journal

Monday, one of the busiest days in Madison County Circuit Court history, saw the courthouse jammed with jurors, attorneys and citizens awaiting trial.

Chief Judge Nicholas Byron said the crowded house was due to summer vacation schedules.

"Summers are bad," Byron said. "To get people to show up, you say, 'OK, we're doing this once a month. If you want to go to Europe, fine, but not this week.'"

Starting at 9 a.m. on a day that saw heat indexes above 100 degrees, a line of people waiting to enter the courthouse ran from the plaza doors to the sidewalk on Second Street. About 150 jurors showed up.

The felony review docket included more than 200 cases, 82 of which were cleared through pleadings before Circuit Judge Charles Romani.

Defense attorney Thomas Hildebrand represented more than 20 cases. "This is the busiest day I've seen," he said. "Judge Romani couldn't have moved faster if he'd been an auctioneer."

Romani verified that it was his busiest day so far. He dealt with several serious cases, including sentencing two area burglars to 20 years in state prison.

Byron said at least three civil trials were going on, along with traffic and misdemeanor appearances.

Making matters worse was the absence of Circuit Judge J. Lawrence Keshner, a criminal judge, who was out of town attending functions of the state bar association.

At least one defendant, Jerad Q. Bradford of Edwardsville, said he had been pushed too far Monday when his appearance was apparently continued.

Bradford said in a telephone interview that he was going on a hunger strike because his appearance has been put off since he was arrested in January on burglary charges.

Bradford maintains his innocence in the charges and said he cannot make bond, which was set at $150,000 because of prior offenses.

Jail Director Capt. Dan Sipes said Bradford refused to eat Monday. Sipes said Bradford's health would be monitored closely and that food would be offered and documented three times a day.

Byron said he doesn't like to schedule the massive docket days but feels he has no choice during the summer.

"You can't call these people here and then have no jury for them," he said.

Byron and other judges have requested new criminal courtroom space from the County Board's Buildings Committee. Architects are being considered to perform a space needs study on the courthouse.

NEWS IN REVIEW

Editor's note: News in review provides a summary of some of the past week's stories. This column is designed for out-of-town readers who do not receive the Sunday and Wednesday Press-Record/Journals.

Expenditures may double

The Madison City Council has approved a $6.6 million appropriation ordinance for administrative expenses, unpaid bills and contract liabilities. Despite the large increase — $3.8 million more than last year — Madison Mayor John Hamm said no tax hikes are planned this year.

Much of the money for current projects is being found through collecting fines, stepping up patrols on speeders and finding money within City Hall's resources, Hamm said.

Raffle funds help illness research

The Berni family was grateful when Granite City Elks held a raffle to raise money for research for their 7-year-old daughter, Natilie. Two years ago Natilie was diagnosed with hyperoxaluria, a rare and deadly disease.

With the help of two local sponsors, Heidman Steel and Novacich's Meat Market — the effort raised more than $3,500 for her raffle and another $300 for the Elks.

Man charged in house fire

A Granite City man accused of setting fire to a house during a dispute was being held on $100,000 bond in the Madison County jail early this week after being charged with aggravated arson, a felony, police said.

Fresh fish gobbled up

Free live fish during the weekend drew nearly 400 people who tromped through mud and water at Horseshoe Lake's south end, hoping to grab and net the creatures as the lake's Park Department completed drainage of the area.

District fishery biologist Rob Maher estimated between 200 and 300 were available, and said not one fish was left.

Black Expo successful

Organizers for the sixth annual Missouri Black Expo projected that more than 50,000 people would pass through the turnstiles during the exposition July 26-27 at America Center in downtown St. Louis. The event featured a myriad of businesses, activities, vendors, speakers and entertainment.

The exposition is the most popular of all the African-American festivals or events in St. Louis area.

Customers caught in middle

Customers hope the Teamsters strike against United Parcel Service, which began Monday, ends soon. How that will happen is where the UPS and union members strongly disagree. The work stoppage was visible Monday at the UPS facility at St. Louis Regional Airport in Bethalto. No packages were being accepted there, not even high-priority items.

Walkers of all ages are expected to take steps to fight heart disease and stroke, America's leading causes of death and disability, at the American Heart Walk at 8 a.m. Aug. 23 at Belleville Area College.

The event participants aren't just walking for their health," says Chuck Eckley, chairperson on the event. "They're raising desperately needed funds to support American Heart Association education programs and lifesaving research. In return for these efforts, each walker who raises $100 and more will earn an American Heart Walk T-shirt and other great thank-you prizes."

In addition to the event's a co-chairperson, Laura Grandy, other volunteers of the 1997 Heart Walk Committee include: Carol Barile, prize chairperson; Norma Crow, publicity chairperson; Kathi Hill and Fatti Klepac, team coordinators; Bob Samples, sponsorship chairperson; and Yvonne Willis, logistics chairperson. Those serving as industry leaders are: Torry Mackin, Roger Taylor, Carol Eckert, Sister Agnes McDougall, Karen Sprinkle, Clara Taylor, Gloria Riado, and Bill Miller.

Sponsors for the AHA Walk are: Boehringer Mannheim, Magna Bank, Marsh, Memorial Hospital, NationsBank, Pepsal, and St. Elizabeth's Hospital of Belleville. Belleville Area College is hosting the walk.

Many area businesses are promoting employee health and wellness by organizing company walking teams. And, don't be surprised if you see red-heart disease, stroke and heart surgery survivors will be honored with special red caps to show that they're fighting back against these deadly diseases.

For information about participating as a walker or team, please contact the American Heart Association at 1-800-637-8666.

SIUE offers students, staff e-mail to go

Fast food, automatic teller machines, gas stations that let you pay at the pump, and now, e-mail on the go?

Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville has introduced "E-mail Express," a way for students, faculty and staff to check their electronic mail accounts while away from their work stations or personal computers.

A row of computer terminals has been set up near the cafeteria in the Edwardsville campus' University Center to give members of the SIUE community instant access.

"This high-profile, easy-access facility provides enhanced service to electronic mail users," said Dean Jay Starratt of the Office of Library and Information Services.

"This project is part of an effort to extend student network services beyond the academic computing labs on campus and the usual access through office computers or personal computers."

More e-mail workstations are planned for classroom buildings, he said.

"We hope to offer additional services, such as access to the World Wide Web," he said.

Mary Reckon, director of the University Center, said, "The (center) is pleased to host this exciting new service for the SIUE community."

"Because it is a hub of student activity, the University Center is a natural location for 'E-mail Express.'"

Granite City

THEFT: A 31-year-old Edwardsville man charged with felony theft is being held in the Granite City Jail on $15,000 bond, according to police reports.

The man, Russell Henry, was arrested Tuesday for allegedly stuffing 17 packs of cigarettes into his sweat pants and passing through the check-out lane without paying for them at Shop N Save at Nemoook Shopping Center, Granite City, police said.

A store employee observed Henry watched him pay for his groceries and called the police, said Assistant Police Chief Kim Pomeroy.

Haine studying fireworks laws

By Terry Hillig
Correspondent

More research will be necessary before there is a decision on the filing of criminal charges in the fatal fireworks accident July 3 in Alton, Madison County State's Attorney William Haine said Tuesday.

Haine also called for better state laws regulating fireworks displays.

Three men employed by Mad Bomber Fireworks Productions Inc., of Crown Point, Ind., died after a skyrocket misfired and returned to a fireworks barge on the Mississippi River, igniting other fireworks. One man was killed by the resulting explosions, and two others drowned after they jumped or were blown overboard.

On July 24, the Illinois Department of Natural Resources levied a maximum $5,000 administrative fine against the company and announced that Haine would be asked to file criminal charges for the company's failure to obtain a state license.

The state agency seeks felony charges under the state's Explosives Act, but Haine said it was unclear to him whether fireworks operators were governed by that act or the state's Fireworks Act.

"We have a number of problems with the way the statute has been written," he said. Haine said the Explosives Act requires state licenses but the Fireworks Act does not. He said the Explosives Act is administered by DNR and the Fireworks Act is administered by the State Fire Marshal's Office.

Haine said the company's president, Andy James, can't be charged personally with violations in Madison County because he never was in the county, Haine said he doesn't yet have enough information about Mad Bomber's corporate structure to file a charge against the corporation.

"The vague and contradictory language makes it very difficult for me to sustain a charge," Haine said it was the first time DNR had sought a felony charge in connection with fireworks violations.

"There are no guideposts; there is no precedent," Haine said he had asked the DNR and the Illinois Attorney General's Office to assist his office in construing the statutes and determining the appropriate venue for charges, if any. He said he expects to reach some conclusions in about two weeks.

"We can't charge just on the basis of a tragic explosion ... as tragic as it was," Haine said. He said he would not feel comfortable charging two Mad Bomber employees who survived the accident.

Haine said the laws governing fireworks need to be clarified and said he had suggested to DNR officials that planned legislation announced Monday by state Rep. Steve Davis, D-Bethalto, could be used to accomplish that goal.

Davis said he wants tightened licensing requirements, including mandatory training for fireworks operators.

"Rep. Davis' bill is the perfect vehicle to clarify this for the State Fire Marshal's Office and the (Department of Natural Resources)," Haine said.

"I want to put a mandate on local authorities to require a license before a (fireworks) contract is signed," he said. "I want the law in Illinois to clearly mandate the safety of fireworks every Fourth of July, and I want it done during the (Legislature's) veto session. It is a tragedy we don't want repeated."

List of names narrowed for pool

By Ron Wisdom
Staff writer

And then there was one. Collinsville Area Recreation District members expect to have a formal name for their waterpark next week.

Mark Badasch, CARD's executive director, said Tuesday that a new name, and possibly a logo, should be revealed on Aug. 13 at a ground-breaking ceremony for the new facility in Eastport Plaza.

Badasch said more than 150 names have been considered by the board and by AKA Design, which was hired to help with the naming process.

The list has been narrowed down to six names: Oasis Waterpark, Rips 'n Slides Waterpark, Splash City, Splashdown Waterpark, and Big Splash Waterpark. Badasch said more than 90 names were sent in by the public after a series of "Name the Waterpark" ads ran.

"AKA Design will now check the Internet for facilities which may be using one of the names," Badasch said. "If they find any duplicates, the name will automatically be eliminated from the list."

He said there will be a reciprocal check for copyright and trademark relicts before a name is chosen.

"If some place in California is using the name, that won't be a problem because there won't be any direct competition," Badasch said. "If it is being used by someone in our region, then we can't use the name."

In other business Tuesday night, the board approved moving its office to 1997 Vandavia, beginning Sept. 1. CARD will lease the office space for $900 a month plus utilities.

Badasch said the park district is talking to officials from the Unit 10 School District, as well as from other schools and local organizations to find space to house classes and activities until the new facility is completed in early 1998.

blocked to one lane, and traffic is stopped for long periods of time.

Bernie Fahey, project implementation engineer of the Illinois Department of Transportation, said his office was not ridden with complaints.

"We haven't heard about too much of that (loss of business)," he said.

"It's (business) a good 30 percent off on account of the construction, and that's not counting the summer when people on vacation come in here," Hester said.

His restaurant previously drew many tourists who stayed at nearby hotels, he said.

"Tourism is practically nil," Hester said.

He wouldn't provide a dollar-figure of his losses, but he said, "I know the faces who used to be here on a regular basis are not here. It's aggravating. It's totally disruptive."

"Traffic comes to a complete stop — for an hour-and-a-half, often at lunch time," Hester said. "Maryville Road has been cut off at 10:30 in the mornings, and people say, 'let's go the other way.'"

In addition, he said, Granite City lunch customers no longer eat there because no one wants to get caught in a traffic jam on your lunch hour. It's devastating.

However, Janie Bowman, owner of the Luna Cafe in Mitchell, has no complaints.

"I haven't hurt my business," she said, "because these guys (construction workers) come in and eat. Workers from Mitchell come in and eat lunch," he said.

Fahey does not hold much hope for early signs of clear roadways, however.

"The first contract, which is the east-bound project we're working on, now has a November completion date, but we expect it to be done late September or early October," he said.

"Then work begins on the west-bound project. At the present date, the project has a completion date of Oct. 1, 1999. But we feel if everything goes well this fall, we can get those lanes open about December of 1998, which is 10 months earlier," he said.

"It's going to help everybody," he said.

The size of the project involves I-270 from Interstate 55 to the Mississippi River, Fahey said.

fied, said he had not anticipated the strike and wishes it were over. "I thought the company would be hard-core for a while and then break down," he said, stressing that he does not want to go on strike. "None of us. I just want a job. I want to make a decent living."

Kristi Wolfgang, a company spokeswoman at UPS headquarters in Atlanta, said UPS is using 50,000 management and administrative employees to deliver packages in the United States. Even so, the company delivered only 10 percent of its normal daily volume Monday, she said.

"Those figures may not be accurate, because even our numbers-crunchers are out there delivering," she said.

Kerry Ford, a manager at the Alton Center, said the 10 percent figure was not the case here. He estimated drivers delivered "a little less than half" of the normal volume.

One driver, who said he was working three routes to get as many packages delivered as possible, said he encountered some hostility from other motorists who thought he was a "scab," someone who crossed the picket line.

People yelled, made obscene hand gestures and even spit at him, he said.

Wolfgang said reports of those types of incidents have been "sporadic and minimal."

Many people are using the U.S. Postal Service as an alternative to the delivery service. Collinsville Postmaster Sandy Rauch said that Monday was "very busy," while Tuesday and Wednesday were slower. Rauch said if Local 710 joins the strike or if the strike goes unresolved for more than a few more days, she expects things to get a lot busier.

The USPS express delivery service has already doubled its volume this week, Rauch said.

Because of the anticipated increase, the USPS issued a release Tuesday limiting the number of parcels that any local post office can accept to four per customer per visit.

Richman said. "Today, more than half of people with cancer will survive the disease. There are more than eight million Americans alive today who have a history of cancer."

In addition, he said, "we now know that more than half of the people who are prevented through healthy lifestyle choices, particularly avoiding tobacco and choosing a low-fat diet."

Where prevention is impossible, volunteers of the American Cancer Society strive to make early detection of cancer normal, Richman said.

Jail last year.

"If they are not rehabilitated, they go back in," he said.

Probation Department Director Darrell McGibany presented state statistics indicating, among other things, that the number of felony convictions had tripled between 1988 and 1995 and adult probation cases were up 66 percent in the same period.

A tally of cases by location indicated one satellite office in the southern district around Granite City and one in the northern district around Alton almost equally.

Satellite offices offer greater surveillance, more accountability and an opportunity to work closely with local police on joint patrol, he said.

Crowded conditions in the single Edwardsville office also were creating privacy and security problems for probation officers as their caseloads increase and grow more complex, McGibany said.

Field offices will need about 4,000 square feet to accommodate 10 probation officers and clerks at each site. The complex needs a meeting room/classroom, accessible restrooms, adequate wiring, parking and zoning, Monday said.

Madison County State's Attorney Bill Haine said probation officers working the satellite offices also will need a certified cell where someone could be locked up in the middle of the night if they were not where they said they would be.

"I want probation officers on the scene in the middle of the night checking on them. We're putting them away, but guys on probation call it 'paper time,'" he said.

Haine defended the Madison jail building with its adequate cell. A prisoner had attempted suicide in the cell once, but Haine said the incident occurred because the prisoner was left unattended.

The probation program needs a certified cell and a jailer to watch the prisoner, he said.

Monday said the satellite offices could be considered as part of the county budget next year but funds are not available in the current budget.

Memories that last a lifetime

The moment I saw Gratia's familiar handwriting on the envelope, I knew what her message would be. The only question, "Who, this time?"

Sure enough, she wrote, "Here's the shoe I dropped. First Dick, now Bob gone. We were at Sue's Thursday night on our way home from Wisconsin and had a great time recalling Bob's greatest childhood threats, etc. Perfect picture of him: dirty glasses, freckles, torn knickers, grubby socks and black nails. Ooh, they were black! Anyhow he grew up to be a real dapper gentleman in dress."

She went on to recount family news, since I'd seen her in May and enclosed Bob's obituary. I regretted not having made a point of seeing him last summer when the opportunity was there. After all, I'm a big girl now. Older and wiser enough not to have become a participant in any of the type of mischief that had brought me to near-grief in my childhood.

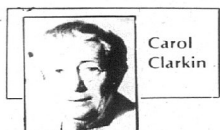

The note brought home to me several things I rarely think about these days, among them being that Gratia herself has changed very little over the nearly 65 years of our friendship.

Always the organizer, she is the one we all rely on for any news of interest or importance to the rest of us. She is clear-headed, realistic, often blunt.

Accurate, too, in detailing not only Bob's appearance as a kid, but in describing having "a great time" remembering those years with Sue and Jim. The deaths of Dick and Bob, so close together, bring to mind surviving fellows from our old crowd of 10 down to four, but at our age we've come to accept the inevitable; and rather than mourn, find comfort in remembering the fun years.

When Dick died this spring, I went home for his memorial service at which Jim, Gratia and myself were the only members of the old bunch able to attend. During lunch, we talked a bit about just that. How easy it's become to accept without undue grief the loss of our peers. How sorrow and shock seem now to affect us only when we learn of the death of those much younger than we.

And how little most of us

have changed, basically, from our youth in terms of personality. Dick, as a kid, was neat and good-looking enough to verge on pretty. A nice boy, I can't remember him ever doing a mean or hurtful thing to anyone. Intelligent enough but lethargic in the extreme. He was the slowest-moving individual I've ever known. And all these traits remained with him as an adult.

Bob, on the other hand, was the antithesis of Dick, aside from intelligence. Very, very bright, quick to learn and retained seemingly forever. But grubby, sloppy and not particularly nice. Certainly not well-behaved by anyone's standards — a born rascal. I'm sorry I missed the shared reminiscences of Sue, Gratia and Jim.

I could have added a few of my own, beginning with my blackmail payments to him starting in the fifth grade and lasting into the seventh grade. The incident in high school relating to his theft of my Latin textbook (and daily translation) was a real head-banger. The water torture or slow boiling in bra, mine and not what you might think.

The Halloween night when he tied Cynthia's hands behind her back and ankles bound, and left her in an alley behind the public library. The houses egged, and street lamps broken.

Was the adult Bob the same rascal he'd been as a youth? Ostensibly, no. A highly respected and successful attorney at which his respectable boy he'd been, according to his obit.

Personally, I'd like to think that at least a fraction of the scamp remained, the kid who threatened us with the Chinese water torture or slow boiling in oil, with none of us certain whether he was serious or not. Whatever, he wouldn't have missed knowing him for the world. He was one of a kind.

GUEST COLUMN

Separating men from boys

The recent revelations by Liggett Group that tobacco companies aim their advertising at young people have left only one comment: Duh! Any business has to attract new customers, and what better time to start than when they are young? How many of us Baby Boomers, for example, "remember" the Wonder Bread commercials we saw on "Howdy Doody"?

I'm no psychologist, but even the most casual observer of tobacco advertising will notice it's hard to sell a product to a clientele who's literally dying out. So you have to start them young. The recent Joe Camel ads, by the way, were not the first aimed at the young wannabe smokers. Try these slogans from years back: "There's a man, there's a Marlboro" (this was before the first cowboy ever set foot into Marlboro Country). The man handling the Marlboro bore a tattoo.

Or, "Man to man, smoke a Ro-Tan" — a full page ad with the magazine equivalent of a video where handsome, macho guys chomping away on their cigars. How about Barney Rubble reminding smokers "it's what's in the kid's head" in a Winston cigarette commercial on "The Flintstones"?

I should note "The Flintstones" was, ostensibly, the first cartoon series aimed at adults, and it was sponsored by Winstons and Alka-Seltzer for its first two seasons, but after Pebbles and Bam-Bam came along, kids ruled.

Last and certainly least, there was the Lucky Strike radio jingle reminding everyone that "Luckies separate the men from the boys... but not from the girls." Back then, you could buy any kind of Lucky Strike you wanted, as long as you were a man, straight and unfettered. It took a real man to smoke one, compared to a filter cigarette.

If the cigarette which was sung by four guys suffering from testosterone overload, wasn't water torture, reinforced by another, Deep Voiced Male who intoned, "Smoking is a pleasure meant for adults... and there's nothing like the adult taste of a Lucky Strike." He might as well have added, "Hey, kid! Wanna put some hair on your chest? C'mon, be a big man, light up a Lucky!"

That ad was yanked from the air shortly after the Surgeon General's Report on Smoking and Health was published in 1964. The report found that tobacco advertising was gone within a decade.

In 1986, Camel's market share rose to 8 percent, and by 1993 it was up to 16 percent (Consumer Reports, March 1996).

I wonder how many men now in their 40s and 50s began smoking Lucky Strikes to separate the men from the boys. I wonder how many young people are smoking Camels today because of the antics of the "hairy" pack? I wonder how many of them have, or will develop, heart disease, lung cancer, or emphysema as a result.

And that really separates the men from the boys. As well as the girls. (Charles E. Geer is a Granite City resident.)

EDITORIAL

County fatalities don't have to happen

Madison County received some bad news for the second straight quarter with another increase in traffic fatalities.

The rest of the state continued to show a decline in traffic fatalities. The key factor in most of the deaths has been alcohol, and most of the fatalities were young people 30 years old and younger. Programs are in place through the coroner's office and the county's DUI task force to discourage drinking and driving among young people, but apparently some are not getting the message.

Madison County had eight traffic fatalities this quarter, up from five the same period last year. When both the first and second quarters are added together, the county reported 25 traffic deaths in the first six months of 1997 up from 16 the previous year.

We hope these traffic statistics send home a message to those who drink and drive. It is never worth the risk. We encourage more education about drinking and driving both in our school systems and through the county's DUI task force.

A recent study shows that about 64 percent of Madison County residents are wearing seat belts.

With 36 percent of people still not buckling up, we urge them to do so.

Improved education of young people, buckling up and not drinking and driving can solve a lot of our area traffic fatalities.

Electricity rates

TO THE EDITOR:

As lieutenant governor, part of my job is to help Illinoisans keep more of their earnings by giving them the freedom to choose their electric supplier.

Lieutenant governor
Overwhelming support
TO THE EDITOR:

After winning the Illinois state wrestling tournament in both Freestyle and Greco Roman wrestling, I was given an opportunity to represent Illinois in the National Championships. The cost to participate was $775. The qualifiers were given raffle tickets and a solicitation letter to raise these expenses.

I was overwhelmed by the support I received from the business community, relatives, friends and neighbors. Most people I talked to were supportive and encouraging. Many wrestlers on the team from other areas throughout the state were not as well-received in their efforts. I feel this speaks highly of Granite City and all who live and work here.

I would like to publicly thank all who supported me: the Granite City Wrestling Club, Granite City Elk's Lodge, Eagle's Club, Home Town Sports, the Medicine Shoppe, Dempsey-Adams Auto Body, Charbonnier State Farm Insurance, the CCU staff at St. Elizabeth's Medical Center, the staff at Wilson Elementary School, Frank Ortiz, Jerry McKeehan, Sam Greco, Jim DeLeonardis and everyone in the community who bought raffle tickets.

At the nationals, I finished second in Freestyle and third in Greco Roman. I joined Granite City's team at Venn, where we finished second in Greco Roman, as the first-ever Cadet All-Americans from Granite City. These accomplishments belong to all of Granite City, and I feel proud and lucky to live in a community that supports its youth.

Thank you.

Marijuana
not a remedy
TO THE EDITOR:

The proposed use of marijuana as a medical remedy for nausea from chemotherapy, chronic pain, AIDS-related symptoms, etc., is a bucket reprieve with holes.

Marijuana has long been proven to subject its users to risk of physical and psychological dangers. The 425 currently identified chemicals in marijuana convert to thousands of additional chemicals when smoked. Many of these chemicals have already been identified as carcinogens, and marijuana has been linked with respiratory disease, birth defects, immune system suppression, accidents, failure to learn, lack of motivation, etc.

At this time there is not scientific evidence that marijuana is beneficial for any medical condition. In a May 1997 report in the Annals of Internal Medicine, an article by Eric Voht, M.D., and Richard Schwartz, M.D., states, "Pure THC is already available as a prescription medication. Crude marijuana does not qualify as a medicine and (should) remain a Schedule I drug."

It is irresponsible to put judgment and reasoning on hold. It is also irresponsible to allow cognitive impairment to themselves and others. It is also irresponsible to take a drug unnecessarily and put ourselves at risk of addiction and all the social, moral and health problems that addictions commonly incur at a tremendous cost to the addict and society.

By placing marijuana in the "medically beneficial" category, the implication is that the risk is acceptable. That there are benefits. That it's just like other medications; there may be some side effects, some dangers, but we accept those risks because the patient is helped with his pain, his functioning. The fallacy is that there currently is little evidence that marijuana has any legitimate medical benefits and more evidence that it has caused considerable harm in many users.

The authors opt for a world in which our children are safe and healthy. Join us all, on this moral journey and crusade. For sure, let's rout the Geobells of legalization before their benighted lies rout our children.

Trust foundation seeks host families

Educational Resource Development Trust, an established nonprofit foundation, is seeking volunteer host families in our community.

The SHARE! High School Exchange Program brings international teens from about 20 different countries around the globe to the USA for a semester or academic school year. The students are described by Melissa Kennedy, Program Director, as "intelligent, interesting and the top representatives of their countries."

Students have their own medical coverage while in the U.S. and bring their own spending money.

American host families provide room and board. Most importantly, the family provides a warm, accepting and loving environment for the young person who is far from home.

In return, everyone receives true friendship for life. Students share everything from chores around the house to Christmas with grandma. Families learn a great deal about their own culture and values as they show their student the local sights. Holiday sharing experiences are unique and strengthen the bonds of student and host family. Many American families later spend vacations with their international "son" or "daughter."

"We have many different types of host families," explains Kennedy. "Families with teens, families with younger children, empty nesters. There are not requirements regarding configuration of host families, only that the environment is safe and friendly. Families select their own students based on common interests. Our local Exchange Program Coordinators provide education and assistance to the host family throughout the entire process."

To discover more about the exciting world of hosting an international student, call Kennedy at the Midwest Regional Office, toll-free 800/874-3838. In some communities, opportunities are available for Exchange Program Coordinators.

Midwest to salute masters of art

Art Fest features sneak preview

Great art, the classical sound of jazz guitar and the best of St. Clair County cuisine will be on hand at the preview party of the Midwest Salute to the Masters Festival of Fine Art.

The grand opening of Salute weekend will be Aug. 22, offering a "sneak preview" to a select audience of Salute supporters. The show opens to the public on Aug. 23 at Longacre Park in Fairview Heights.

Currently planned for about 1,200 guests, the preview party is held to encourage people to make pre-purchase agreements to buy art.

"The artists who apply to our annual event are among the most talented contemporary artists in the nation," said Carol Warner, director of the festival exhibit. "They have their choice among national exhibits in which to showcase their talent. And, because top-quality artists consider festivals to be a business, they select to display their work at venues where sales are high."

Pre-purchasing art consists of sending a check for a minimum of $50 to the city of Fairview Heights' festival pre-purchase chairman prior to the opening of the art fair. The city acts as a clearinghouse.

Once your pledge is received, the city sends back what festival organizers call "funny money" in the amount of the check. Also enclosed is an invitation to the preview party, good for two people to enter the grounds on the evening of Aug. 22. The funny money is used in lieu of cash to purchase art at the festival.

For information on obtaining an invitation to the event, call 632-9632 or send a check ($50 or more, in increments of $25) to the Midwest Salute to the Masters Festival, Hoelscher Engineering, 333 Salem Place, Fairview Heights, 62208.

If you enjoy being surrounded by beautiful artwork, delight in seeing youngsters involved in masterpiece creation, or just like to socialize with large numbers of people, you're a likely candidate to spend some volunteer time on the grounds at the Midwest Salute to the Masters Festival of Fine Art.

During the weekend of Aug. 22-24, the festival spotlights 100 award-winning artists who are coming to Fairview Heights from three continents in order to sell their work and compete for more than $17,000 in prize money.

Volunteers may choose from among dozens of different positions. Among the many different jobs to fill are selling souvenirs, staffing the information station, supervising the children's Creation Station activities, seeing that entertainers are guided to the appropriate stage, relieving artists who require a break, and general trouble-shooting. Shifts are four hours long.

Those interested in volunteering should contact Salute Volunteer Coordinator Jerry Wilmering at 238-1697.

Each volunteer will be invited to an indoctrination meeting a week before the festival, where they will be treated to beverages and cake, celebrating the 10th anniversary of this wonderful cultural event. At the meeting, each will receive a brightly-colored T-shirt, which is to be worn on the grounds during the volunteer's shift. There will be a "thank you" cocktail party after the event.

The exhibitors include painters, sculptors, jewelry artists, glass specialists, photographers, graphic designers and potters. They are truly masters in their various media, as each of them has already been a major award winner in another national competition.

Everyone who has been on the grounds at Longacre Park in Fairview Heights during the Salute's weekend knows that this busy festival, which promotes both visual and performing arts to you and old alike, couldn't possibly enjoy the excellent reputation that it does without the help of dedicated workers, who offer their time and talent to make it work.

Agency connects parents to foreign adoptions

For about 450 people who attended a reunion last month, Small World isn't just part of the name of a cute Disney song. To them, it signifies family and home.

The reunion, which included a picnic, was July 26 at Villa Duchesne-Oak Hill School, 801 S. Speede Road in St. Louis. It was attended by the adoptive parents of children through the Small World Adoption Foundation.

Small World, 1270 Fee Fee Road, handles adoptions of children from St. Petersburg, Ukraine and Belarus. It was founded in 1992 by the husband and wife team of Drs. Slava Platonov and Yelena Kogan. Platonov and Kogan, both pediatricians, saw the plight of orphans in the former Soviet Union and sought to find homes for them in America and abroad. They have placed more than 250 orphaned children with families in the St. Louis area, said April Ridings, donations coordinator at Small World.

Ridings has a 4-year-old son and a 3-year-old daughter she adopted through Small World.

"The waiting — once we'd chosen a child — was the hardest," Ridings said. "The purpose of the reunion is to give support to those waiting. It's also to keep in touch with the children and see how they and their families are doing."

The hot-and-soda crowd at the event included Drs. Tom Otto and Elizabeth Engel, both orthopedic surgeons. Together they saw a photo of their now 1-year-old adopted daughter, Alexandra, who was born missing a forearm. The couple traveled to and from Belarus and fitted Alexandra for a prosthesis. In June, they picked up their blond, hazel-eyed daughter to complete their family.

"Small World is fantastic," Engel said.

"They made the whole process easier."

People who attended the reunion were eager to talk about Platonov and Kogan. As families disembark from a plane with their new children, Platonov and Kogan greet them with teddy bears, balloons and hugs. They also examine the children to assess their health.

Platonov and Kogan also advise caretakers at orphanages how best to care for and stimulate proper development in the children.

"Our program is unique," Platonov said. "There are plenty of adoption agencies, but we go to see the children for ourselves. We're both pediatricians and speak the language, so we know what to look for."

In fact, the couple traveled recently through 14 cities in the former Soviet Union to help place children with families. There are more than half a million orphans in that area, in the wake of its break with communism, Kogan and Platonov said.

Many of the children who need homes are not technically orphaned, but have been left to the mercy of others at hospitals by parents unable to care for them, Kogan and Platonov said.

The pool comes from unwed mothers as well as parents who found one more month to feed too overwhelming.

"There were always orphans even in good economic times," Kogan said. "Now there are even more, but it's become easier for Americans to adopt them, so we really need to find good families for all these abandoned children."

Brenda Henn, Small World's program director, has three children, including one she adopted.

"I have the most awesome job in the world — helping people adopt children," Henn said.

Sandra and Roy Cook of St. Louis have two children they brought home from St. Petersburg — Kasey, 4, and Kalei, 9. Like all the parents at the reunion, the Cooks said adopting the children through Small World was the best thing they ever did.

Beth and Brock Smith of St. Louis adopted 14-month-old Reed from St. Petersburg when he was 9 months old, after a 13-month wait to receive a child.

"Our trip was wonderful," Beth Smith said. "The baby was shy at first but within an hour he was fine with everything."

Diane and Ken Drilling adopted their son Joie through Small World after several heart-breaking incidents with other adoption agencies, they said.

"We've been badly burned before, with much financial and emotional loss, but with Small World we were able to come home with this healthy, beautiful child," Diane Drilling said. "He's our miracle baby."

Fairview considers pro baseball

When I heard of the possibility of minor league baseball coming to Fairview Heights, I pushed my information aside because I thought there was no way professional ball could come to the St. Louis area without the permission of the Cardinals and/or major league baseball.

Shows you what I know about the matter. Affiliation is the key word here, and, obviously, if someone tried to place a Cardinals affiliate close to St. Louis, it's very unlikely such would happen.

However, if a team were a minor league independent, it could establish its roots anywhere.

"That's why they are called independent," Saugat told me without scolding me for my ignorance. It was no coincidence that I contacted Saugat to learn about the possibility of pro baseball in Southwestern Illinois. Long before Fairview Heights had turned its Legion Field into the impressive baseball facility it has in Longacre park, Saugat was contacted by pro baseball representatives interested in placing a team in Saugat.

And, prior to getting involved after he had built a sports complex in Saugat, Rich, nearly 30 years ago, tinkered with the idea of becoming an owner in the San Francisco major league franchise.

An experienced entrepreneur, Saugat played minor league ball as a catcher in the Giants and Atlanta Braves organizations in the 1960s. Later, after entering business in Saugat, he considered purchasing the Braves minor league team in Macon, Ga.

"There are many factors you have to consider before you get into something like that," said Saugat, after admitting he was contacted by Blues hockey announcer Ken Wilson, who is part of the group bringing minor league baseball to O'Fallon, Mo.

At a recent Fairview Heights City Council meeting, members reached a consensus that they liked the idea of having a minor league team but felt Longacre Park was not the proper venue for one.

Ward 2 Alderman Scott Rich was quoted as saying, "We didn't feel like we could service their needs adequately."

Needs would include additional seating, locker rooms and enclosing the field. In speaking with Saugat, though, I was reminded of such things as concession rights, travel and publicity costs.

Meanwhile, it is not surprising that independent teams and leagues have popped up across the country under the names of Frontier, Heartland and Pioneer. Like Springfield, Ill., Evansville, Ind., Richmond, Ind., Kalamazoo, Mich., and Canton, Ohio, are but a few of the locations.

By coincidence, 23-year-old Rich Saugat Jr. is a relief pitcher with Johnson City (Pa.) of the Class A Frontier League. Released by the Chicago White Sox organization in spring training after being struck on his right bicep (throwing arm), the former Notre Dame football and baseball player moved with the independent team.

After 25 innings as a setup man and closer, Rich had a 3-3 record and was putting together statistics similar to his numbers last summer when he struck out 39 and walked just nine in 47 1/3 innings at Hickory, N.C.

"With major league expansion coming, he thought he'd like to give it another shot," said the elder Saugat, who comes in many forms when it comes to pro baseball.

OVERTEW: While Richie Saugat extended his baseball career, his sister, Annie, a junior-lob at Springfield (Ala.) College, continues to assert herself in amateur tennis.

Annie (pronounced Annie) recently rallied for a 6-4, 6-3 win in the finals of the Class A Women's Championship at Dwight Davis in St. Louis and has teamed with Anne Castello of Belleville in doubles competition.

Four Lady Warriors teaming up at Lewis & Clark

By Patrick C. Heston Staff writer

Four Granite City High School graduates have signed national letters of intent to play women's soccer for Lewis & Clark University.

SOCCER

Joining Jamie Hendrickson and Roxie Simpson from the Lady Warriors' 23-1 state tournament team in 1997 are two girls who did not play for coach Gene Baker their senior season, Tara Tomlinson and Rachel Kennerly.

Tara Tomlinson was an all-state tournament selection her junior year. Baker said, "I nominated her for consideration on the all-state team last year, and I'm confident she would have been all-state this year, if she would have played."

Tara is an exceptional dribbler, who penetrates very well. She will make an outstanding junior college player."

Traillblazers coach Tim Rooney is also quite high on Tomlinson.

"The thing I really like about Tomlinson is that she is very good at taking people one-on-one," Rooney said. "In fact, she's one of the best one-on-one players I've seen in a long time." Kennerly, like Tomlinson, handles the ball well. "Rachel is an outstanding ball handler," Rooney said. "She will make a powerful winger in our system." Baker describes Kennerly as a player "possessing excellent speed and capable of" (See LCCC, Page 3B)

Sweep lifts Edwardsville to junior Legion crown

By Brian Bretsch Staff writer

Edwardsville Junior Legion Post 199 would probably like to punch the person who came up with the adage "third time's a charm."

Then they could reach down with a glad hand, help them back to their feet, pat the person on the back and say — "fourth time's a charm."

It took Post 199 four games to finally find a way to top Fairview Heights. Edwardsville not only beat Post 978 once, but twice in a row to win the Junior Legion state tournament Sunday at O'Fallon Community Park. Prior to the finals of the double elimination state tournament in Fairview Heights had topped Edwardsville three straight times.

Fairview Edwardsville advanced to the Great Lakes Junior American Legion Regional Tournament in Bay City, Mich., which begins today.

"We played well the first two games of the state tournament and then we come out against Fairview and did not play our game. They put it to us. That stuck in the loser's bracket," Edwardsville manager Brian Clawson said. "We wound up playing Springfield for the right to go back to the championship series. We did play well against them. We hit the ball, made good plays, made good decisions defensively and got back there on Sunday to play against Fairview."

"Myself included, just the way we had played against them the last three times in eight days, I don't think too many people gave us a chance

Local lifters shine in high school meet

By Patrick C. Heston Staff writer

Granite City athletes led the field in Saturday's high school weightlifting meet held at the Tri-City YMCA in Granite City.

The meet was divided into junior varsity competition for freshmen and sophomores, varsity competition for juniors and seniors, and teenage open competition for recent graduates from high school.

Place winners were determined on a pound-for-pound basis, comparing weight lifting to body weight. An athlete lifting a lower weight than an opponent could, for example, still finish higher than his opponent if his body weight was significantly lower than that of his opponent. In the JV division, Jason Smith of Waterloo was successful on five of six lifts, including a 220-pound squat and a 203-pound bench press. His total of 423 pounds was good for third place.

Patrick Jarman of Granite City finished second, but was the most impressive performer on the day. Not only did Jarman, an exceptional squatter, come up with a lift of 347 pounds, but he did so with cracked ribs. Despite weighing in at 195 pounds, Jarman placed second in the pound-for-pound ranking.

Coaches' words carry less weight at meet

By Patrick C. Heston Staff writer

Last Saturday the Tri-City YMCA hosted a high school weightlifting meet in which several gifted Granite City athletes participated.

The only hitch to an otherwise perfect meet was, in my opinion, the absence of any coach from Granite City High School.

Since I arrived in Granite City the first week of January, coach after coach at GCHS has told me time after time that his or her athletes must work out year-round in order to perform at the level demanded by Southwestern Conference competition and to be successful in their chosen sport. Part of that working out, the coaches say, involves a personal weightlifting program. It is a message they have preached regularly to me.

It is a message they have preached tirelessly to their athletes.

At least some of the athletes got the message. Several were at the YMCA on Saturday. Athletes like Matt Glover, Dane Bauer, Jonas Janek, Curtis Howard and others showed evidence of a strong weightlifting work ethic in the afternoon. (See COACHES, Page 3B)

Paddlers capture SWISA title

By Patrick C. Heston Staff writer

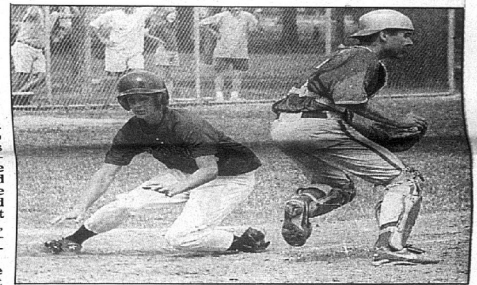

The Granite City Paddlers won the Southwestern Illinois Swimming Association diving meet Saturday, outdistancing their nearest opponent by a whopping 30 points.

Paddlers racked up 72 points to only 42 for Summers-Port of Godfrey. The next four teams, in order, were Montclair, Gaslight, Sunset Hills Country Club and Wedgewood.

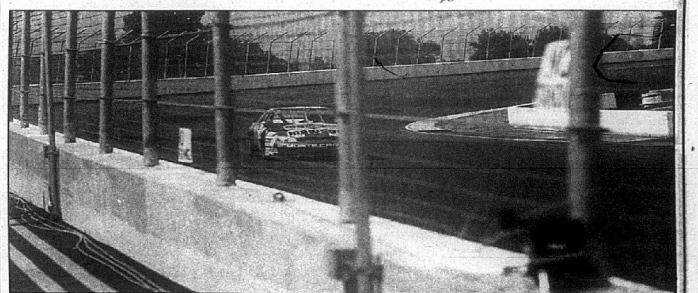

Four individual champions led Paddlers. Jill Ravenelli (8-and-under girls), Tony Jackson (13-14 boys), Ali Krinski (13-14 girls) and Laura Canada (15-18 girls) all took home gold medals from the meet.

Medalists for Paddlers included Sean Lehn, who finished third in the 8-and-under boys division; Ian Nichols, who was third among 11-12 boys; Liz Dochwat, who took third in 11-12 girls; Matt Dittman, who was third in 13-14 boys; Ian Hartsell, who was runner-up in 11-12 boys; and Kevin Harris, who was second in 15-18 boys.

Paddlers receiving ribbons included fifth-place winners Ronnie Weaver (8-and-under boys) and Josh Nicholson (9-10 boys), and fourth-place finisher Steve Logan (15-18 boys).

Gateway International officials will have the track repaved and race ready for the Gateway Twin 100s next month. (Staff photo by JOHN FRESSE)

Paving the way Process gets Gateway oval back to speed

After a week of laboratory testing, pavers went to work on the Gateway International Raceway oval Tuesday to correct problems that cropped up during the 100-degree heat at the inaugural Gateway 300 on July 26.

Crews from Reese Asphalt Co. of Cahokia milled 1 1/2 inches off the surface of the 1.25-mile oval's four turns on Tuesday. Meanwhile, other workers poured test patches of a new mix on a site elsewhere on the grounds.

If that final test went as expected, pavers were to put down a new top layer on the turns starting Wednesday, and will finish their work by week's end. The track will be race-ready long before the ARCA Bondo/Mar-Hyde stock cars and USAC Silver Crown cars compete in the Gateway Twin 100s Sept. 13-14.

On-track temperatures that exceeded 160 degrees led to small fragments of the top layer coming loose and hindering traction during the Gateway 300, a NASCAR Busch Series race. That led to several accidents and 14 cautions before Elliott Sadler took the win. Gateway officials took immediate action to correct the problem.

"The track material that came up during the heat of that particular day was the fine sand that was used with the sealer on the top layer to provide a smooth racing surface," Gateway President and General Manager Rod Wolter said. "We are going back with basically the same mix, but we will use a rubber-based polymer instead of a plastic polymer. We will also put some Portland cement into the mixture to harden it even further."

Wolter added that "to the naked eye, there will be no difference. But the formula will tolerate greater air, track and tire temperatures."

"The combination of this work, and the normal settling process of any new track surface during its first full winter will get us beyond the difficulties we experienced during a period of extreme temperatures this year."

Tickets for the Gateway Twin 100s are available at MetroTix locations and by phone (888) 827-7333 (82-SPEED). Those buying the first 2,000 tickets for Saturday's qualifying sessions and Sunday's racing will receive free garage passes.

Five Star Award for Excellence

AREA NEWS

Germantown Spassfest features fine music, quilting

It's almost time for one of the best and longest-running festivals in Illinois, the Spassfest.

Aug. 16 and 17, mark the 30th anniversary of the annual Germantown Spassfest.

The Spassfest is popular for many reasons, but especially for music. There are 12 groups performing throughout the weekend. On Saturday, The Grappenhous Brothers accompanied by a trumpeter start off at noon. Then Larry Haller's

Two Star Final will be playing German and Polka music. Continuing on Saturday will be Avery Hill and Free Fall, both playing country and rock 'n' roll along with Danny Krausz playing easy listening and dance. The entertainment on Saturday continues until 1 a.m. Sunday starts off at 10 a.m. with Norbert Kalmer on the keyboard. The Grappenhous Brothers accompanied by a guitarist will return on Sunday. The Pat Auberry Band will also be playing German music. Then the Boot Scooters DJs will be playing music for country, line, and partner dancing along with dance demonstrations. Of course there will be the Spassfest traditional Sing-A-Long with The Boomkessel Band. To wrap up, the Polka Connection with German music and Dixie Express playing country and rock 'n' roll will both continue until midnight.

Again this year the fest will host the extremely popular handmade quilt auction. The quilt auction, with over 40 full-size and baby-size quilts, begins at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday. In addition, there will be a carnival with rides, a large variety of games and amusements, plus bingo and prize drawings. Prizes include a new car or pickup truck and a big-screen television.

Naturally there will be lots of food; the usual bratwurst and knackwurst, as well as famous fried chicken, hamburgers, fish, funnel cakes, etc. Breakfast will also be served on Sunday morning from 8-11 a.m. Popular beverages will also be readily available.

This year the all-new 30th anniversary Spassfest cookbook Gufes Essen (which means Good Eating) will be available. This book contains over 730 recipes contributed from the community.

New this year will be a Kids Casting Competition for ages 7-14. This event, which is sponsored nationally by the Basmasters, offers prizes, cash and scholarships. Entry is free, rods and reels are provided, but contestants must be accompanied by a parent or guardian. The competition will run both Saturday and Sunday.

Everything begins at 11 a.m. on Aug. 16 and continues until 1 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 17 starts off with breakfast from 8-11 a.m. with the day's activities continuing until midnight.

one from the sun and weather. The grounds are handicapped accessible.

The Germantown community, and particularly the 1,100 Spassfest volunteers invite everyone to join them in celebrating the 30th anniversary of the Spassfest with a weekend filled with music, food, celebration, fun, and most importantly "Gemutlichkeit!" (which means Gemutlichkeit!)

The Spassfest is held in Red Schoendienst Park, along Highway 161. Germantown is in Clinton County, only 45 minutes from downtown St. Louis and 15 minutes from Carlyle Lake. Admission and parking are, as always, free.

In the past 29 years the Spassfest has raised over $750,000 for worthwhile community projects. These include buying ground for and building a new park, numerous park improvement, building playgrounds, establishing a park maintenance trust fund, and purchase of various types of fire department equipment.

The value of these donations has often times been multiplied by many hours of volunteer time to complete the projects. The Spassfest is indeed a community effort working to improve the community.

Tips help avoid nasty summer insect stings

For millions of Americans, summer brings the threat of insect stings and for some, the danger of severe and sometimes life-threatening reactions.

As part of a nationwide public education program, the American College of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology offers these tips:

• If you are stung and experience symptoms such as trouble breathing, hives, fainting or any symptoms other than pain, itching, redness and swelling at the sting site, you may be having a severe reaction and should seek medical attention immediately.

• If you have experienced a severe reaction, you may have insect sting allergy, a condition which puts you at a high risk of having a similar or worse reaction the next time you are stung.

• Insect sting allergy can be treated. Ask your doctor to refer you to an allergist who can evaluate you for a vaccination program that immunizes against future allergic reactions.

• A sting kit containing injectable epinephrine is emergency rescue medication only. It can stop an allergic reaction in progress, but cannot treat the underlying allergy and therefore, will not protect against future reactions.

SIUE professor will teach in Europe this fall

Riley Maynard, an associate professor of mass communications at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, will be teaching advertising and broadcast news production in Europe at the University of Latvia under a Fulbright grant during the fall semester.

Maynard, who teaches television-radio at SIUE, will also conduct a seminar at the university in popular American music. The university is located in Latvia's capital city, Riga, with a population of about one million, located on the Baltic Sea and north of Poland. Latvia is a newly independent state, the first country to declare its independence when the Soviet Union dissolved.

The Fulbright Program, established under Congressional law, is administered by the former Sen. William Fulbright, is designed to increase mutual understanding between American scholars and those from other countries. Prof. Maynard is among some 1,600 U.S. grantees who will travel abroad under the program for the 1997-98 academic year. He has previously lectured in Europe and, before joining the SIUE faculty in 1981, had spent 10 years in broadcast journalism at five television stations.

A native of West Virginia, currently residing in Collinsville, Maynard received a baccalaureate and a master's in broadcast journalism, both from the University of West Virginia, and a doctorate in American Studies from Saint Louis University. His 14-year-old son, Nathan, will also travel to Riga with his father and attend the International School in nearby Jurmala. Maynard's wife, Barbara, and their nine-year-old daughter, Meredith, will join them in Riga at Christmas. Returning to SIUE at the first of the year, Prof. Maynard will then resume his teaching duties at SIUE.

Under the Fulbright Program, some 4,000 grants are awarded annually to American students, teachers, and scholars to study, conduct research throughout the world, and to foreign nationals who engage in similar activities in the United States. Individuals are selected on the basis of academic and professional qualifications, past performance, and willingness to share ideas and experiences with others of diverse cultures.

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED

Attorney At Law

Recently a man who had lost his job came to this office contemplating bankruptcy. He was four months behind on his trailer payment and five months in arrears on his car payment. Both of these assets were pledged as security on bank notes. That course of action was threatening to repossess these items of personal property if the arrears were not paid in full.

The question arose as to whether the debtor should file a Chapter 7 bankruptcy, also known as a "straight" bankruptcy, or a Chapter 13 Wage Earner Plan. Under a Chapter 7, the debtor lists all of his unsecured debts on the bankruptcy petition and usually is allowed to discharge in full all of these obligations. With a Chapter 13, however, the individual sets up a plan to pay the creditors on a monthly basis over a three to five year period.

In helping the client decide what course of action to follow, the primary question was whether the debtor wished to keep the trailer and car or surrender them to the creditors. If the client hoped to keep the property and filed a Chapter 7 straight bankruptcy, he would have to immediately bring all the arrears current. In most cases, where people are experiencing financial difficulties, of course, they are unable to instantly pay four or five months of payments. One advantage to a Chapter 13 Wage Earner Plan in this situation is that the debtor can pay back payments over a three to five year period and thus keep the property. The creditor is now allowed to repossess the property if the debtor files a Chapter 13 and makes his back payments on a regular basis.

What course of action would be best for the client in our example? In this case, the debtor was only drawing unemployment benefits and was unable to make the monthly payments on the trailer or the car. To establish a Chapter 13 Plan and attempt to pay the back payments over time appeared to be a futile effort. The debtor was not interested in keeping the assets due to his present financial situation. In this case, he decided to file a Chapter 7 straight bankruptcy and return the trailer and car to the respective creditors. This meant that the creditors could never pursue him in an effort to collect any balances owed on the notes.

ENTERTAINMENT

Thursday, Aug. 7
The sun in fiery Leo gets a boost when the moon enters Libra early this morning. While the moon is in beauty-oriented Libra, people will be strongly attracted to each other. Everyone feels romance in the air. Leo's initiating influence over the sun helps us act on our impassioned thoughts. When a flirtatious acquaintance says you are being aggressive, take it as compliment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You can make suggestions on someone's effort, but don't rub it in! A sweetie offers just what you've been craving intellectually. A sibling or close friend requests your honest insight, but be delicate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You exceed the expectations at work and have even higher ideals for yourself. Relax, give yourself some credit for once. Love possibilities open to you. Find a playmate with like humor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
You can live high on the hog, but choose to save money instead — be wise! Your work summary puts you in a favorable light. With your confidence, you can get away with almost anything, making it hard to be good.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You get energy from working with inspirational people or engaging in a sizzling flirtation. Put your ideas out there — maybe people won't get them today, but they will eventually.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
As always, your style draws admiration from others, even copy cats. Give your best shot to a romance or creative opportunity. When you seek rejection in the face, it retreats! Love tonight is too difficult to resist.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 7)
Your self-esteem grows with each adventure this year. From now until September, career strides put you in a highly successful mode. A sweetie wants to spend every minute with you through October — set boundaries to have time to yourself. Aquarius and Virgo make tender mates and supportive friends. A major attitude shift is essential in November — wishful thinking will fulfill your need to expand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
A cash gift helps your financial picture — wishful thinking is rewarded. Scorpios are particularly intriguing and might talk you into something you normally wouldn't consider doing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Give a teacher-student relationship time and patience to grow. Put your intimate feelings in writing for a loved one. Singles on missions to find love will come up dry, but they'll find other adventures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
The past is over — you've grown. Don't expect friends and family to treat you the same. This new you is better and deserves your loving care. Brainstorm on the subject of travel!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
You get outstanding results from a frank romantic talk. Threats and ultimatums don't work — saying what you want does, then doing it works wonders. Make simple repairs now so you can relax all week-end.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Your reactions are remembered as well as your actions — make sure you're really listening. Ask about possible hidden costs before employing a service. Love thrives on challenge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
When you do the proper upkeep of your possessions, you send a message to the universe that you are a worthy caretaker. Watch the bounty that follows. One classy move erases a past wrong.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
A helper makes your presentation exceptional. When a friend shows evidence of anxiety, you have the power to comfort him or her. A business venture that has been in limbo shows the first signs of progress.

Davis seeks tighter fireworks licensing

ALTON — An area legislator wants to tighten licensing requirements for companies that put on large-scale fireworks displays.

State Rep. Steve Davis, D-Bethalto, said the need for such action is evident since an accident that killed three fireworks operators at Alton's July 3 fireworks display, Davis said he would introduce legislation that requires the Illinois Department of Natural Resources to institute a training program as part of its licensing procedure by March 31 and require companies to obtain permits for fireworks displays from local municipalities.

Permits could be issued only to companies with state licenses.

"With this legislation, hopefully we can prevent such a devastating accident from ever happening again," Davis said.

Davis said current law does not require formal training for fireworks operators.

"This is a safety issue for the operators and for the people who come out to see the fireworks every Fourth of July," he said.

Three workers for Mad Bomber Fireworks Productions Inc., of Crown Point, Ind., were killed July 3 when a skyrocket misfired and fell back onto a fireworks barge in the Mississippi River, igniting many of the shells on board. One man was killed by the blasts. Two others drowned after being blown off or jumping off the barge.

On July 24, Brent Manning, director of the Department of Natural Resources, announced a maximum $5,000 administrative fine against the company and said the department would ask Madison County State's Attorney William Haine to file criminal charges against the company for handling fireworks without a state license.

SIUE gets arts grant

Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville's Arts and Issues series, which is entering its 13th year of bringing distinguished speakers and performers to Southwest Illinois audiences, is among a select group of Midwest presenters chosen to receive the 1997-98 Arts Midwest Performing Arts Touring Fund grant.

This $1,391 award will support an institute conducted by Pilobolus Too, the dance company that will appear Sept. 18 on the Arts and Issues stage. The institute, a series of comprehensive and intensive workshops in improvisational dance, will be offered Sept. 13-18 throughout Southwest Illinois.

Arts Midwest is a regional arts organization that provides funding, publications, services, and conducts conferences throughout Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin. The touring fund helps presenters of music, theater, dance and dance introduce professional artists from outside their state to local audiences.
